

“Parenting an Anxious Child or Teenager”

workshops in Saffron Walden

21 March and 22 March

Is this you?

You are the parent of a child or teenager who is very anxious or angry. You are confused about where this anxiety/anger has come from and how best to deal with it. Sometimes you are reassuring and other times you think it might be best to 'toughen' your child up a little to life's uncertainties. Perhaps your time is spent sorting out arguments and disputes caused by just one family member?

Is this your child?

S/he is overly worried about tests, exams, crowds, germs, friendships, the health of the people s/he loves or frequently having big emotional meltdowns. It seems that each day brings a new thing to worry or be angry about and you are increasingly trying to manage what s/he is exposed to.
