

Parenting Together

Support Programme

Welcome to the December edition of the Parenting Together Newsletter!

Whilst many people are looking forward to the holiday period, we are also aware that many families in conflict find this time of year particularly difficult.

The Parenting Together Programme continues to support parents who are finding their stresses and issues are impacting their relationship and their children.

Since we launched in 2019 over 400 Frontline Practitioners have referred to the Programme where currently 709 parents have gone on to complete an intervention to support their families.

We accept parents who are separated or together, as well as individual referrals if the partner/ ex-partner is reluctant to be involved. Our main exemptions are those in current or very recent domestic abuse situations or in a current court case.

Feel free to have a look through our website, which includes information on the interventions offered and our online referral forms:
